NAVAL ACTIVITY.

Every Available Cruiser Making Ready for Service

THE BALTIMORE IS ALL RIGHT

A Full Force of Men on Ships and Guns at Brooklyn, Boston and Mare Island. Recent Chilian Despatches.

New York, Nov. 9.—These are busy times at the Brooklyn navy yard. Night and day rattling of chains and clanging hammers resound through the usually quiet yard. The big store houses are open all the time and although from the commandant down to the storekeeper one and all say there is nothing up, there is every indication of a hurried departure of the fleet for some kind of foreign service. On all the ships additional coal room has been made and extra stores taken on board.

The Bennington this morning had steam up and was ready to put to sea at a moment's notice. All her men were aboard and no one was allowed shore leave.

The Atlanta, which is on the dry dock is taking on coal and will be ready for sea by Friday.

HURRYING THE GUNS.

New York, Nov. 9.—Commandant Erben this morning was the busiest of the busy men in the navy yard. He reached his office at 9 o'clock and immediately sent a hurried order summoning Captain Kain, the chief engineer, and several other officers. For an hour and a half they were in consultation and then the officers hurried off to different departments and began sending orderlies on the rush in all directions.

A telegraphic order was received at the ordnance department this morning to hurry up certain guns. "Have the guns ready by Friday," said Commandant Erben, "if you have to work overtime." Another dispatch stated that the Newark, now at the navy yard at Charleston, had been ordered to Brooklyn navy yard. The dispatch stated that she must be ready for sea in ten days.

THE NEWARK WANTED.

Boston, Nov. 9.—The navy yard people here say the cruiser Newark cannot be made ready for sea by to-morrow as ordered recently by the department at Washington. It will take at least a week longer to finish the repairs and supply the ship with coal, rations and ammunition. The destination of the Newark is still unknown.

THE PHILADELPHIA AT ST. THOMAS.

St. Thomas, West Indies, Nov. 9.—The United States cruiser Philadelphia arrived here to-day.

A CABLEGRAM FROM SECRETARY.

Washington, Nov. 9.—A cablegram by Secretary Tracy from Captain Schley, dated Valparaiso, Chili, yesterday, states that there are no indications of any feelings of hostilities towards the Baltimore's company at Valparaiso. The navy department announces this morning in following this cablegram for publication, that it was not sent by Captain Schley in response to any inquiry from here. It was probably inspired by the receipt at Valparaiso of telegrams from the friends of the officers of the ship asking about the truth of the rumor that was abroad here two or three days ago that the Baltimore had been blown up by the Chilians.

The Baltimore Safe.

New York, Nov. 9.—A Valparaiso dispatch to The Herald states that Captain Schley and the other officers of the United States warship Baltimore are indignant at the rumor about its sinking, for there is not the least semblance of truth in the rumor. They know that it will have caused a great deal of unnecessary anxiety among the families and friends, and the people generally of the United States. The utmost quietude prevails this morning in this city and in the harbor where the Baltimore is lying as peacefully as if she were in home waters and nothing had happened to disturb life aboard ship. Her stewards for several days past have gone ashore to do necessary marketing under the protection of a police guard furnished by Intendente Aragon. The officers will be granted leave by their captain to land to-night. Although, as a matter of fact, no threats have been made nor any signs been given that violence would be attempted should the American officers appear again on Valparaiso's streets, Captain Schley, in order to be on the safe side and as an act of prudence, had stopped night leave until to-day. In reply to a letter sent to Captain Schley asking him to allow the victims of the recent riot to appear before the court of inquiry and tell Judge Foster what they knew of the outrageous assault upon them, Captain Schley sent word that he was willing to grant them permission to testify on certain conditions. The injured men would first have to be entirely recovered in health and the officers of the Baltimore must be permitted to be present at the inquiry while their men are giving evidence. Captain Schley also agreed to give the court a copy of the information about the assault sent to the United States government.

The San Francisco at Acapulco.

Acapulco, Mex., Nov. 9.—The cruiser San Francisco has arrived here from Callao. The vessel will coal here and will probably receive orders from the navy department at Washington as to her future destination. All on board are well.

A Paymaster Robbed.

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 9.—Some time last night Paymaster George C. C. Smith was robbed at Fort Clark of $330. The money in sacks was placed in one of the cells of the guard house. As the doors were not tampered with it is supposed that a long pole with a hook was thrust through the grated window and one of the sacks drawn up and rifled. Two discharged soldiers who left Fort Clark for San Antonio on Sunday night were suspected of the theft and one of them, John Sullivan, was arrested. A board of officers are investigating the case.

He Was With Custer.

Fort Riley, Kan., Nov. 9.—The famous war horse Comanche, which was ridden by the only man that came out of the Custer massacre alive in June, 1876, died to-day of old age. He had never been ridden since the battle, but had been kept by the Seventh cavalry. He was 25 years old. Professor Dyche of the state university, will mount the skin and skeleton for exhibition at the World's Fair. Comanche was a large gray about 15½ hands high, and was evidently a well bred horse.

A Celebrated Case.

Washington, Nov. 9.—In the Bering sea case, involving important points in the controversy between the United States and Great Britain concerning the right of jurisdiction in Behring sea, brought out an unusual number of people in the chamber of the federal supreme court to hear the arguments of the contending parties. Ex-Secretary Bayard and Senator Edmunds sat within the bar and gave close attention to what was said. A number of other distinguished lawyers were present and every member of the court was in his seat. Attorney-general Miller and Solicitor-general Taft, represented the United States, while Calderon Carlisle of Washington and Joseph H. Choate of New York, appeared for the British government. The case in controversy is that of pioneer W. P. Sayward, a Canadian vessel, seized by the United States in Behring sea, for illegal sealing, supposedly fifty seven miles from any shore. The Sayward was libelled by the United States district court of Alaska for taking seal in violation of the statutes of the United States and the case is now before the supreme court on a motion for a writ of prohibition against the Alaskan court upon the grounds that the vessel was outside the jurisdiction of the United States over the waters of Behring sea. The government when the case came before the supreme court denied the jurisdiction of the court to consider the application for a writ of prohibition but the court held adversely. Briefs were filed for both parties and the case comes up for argument to-day on the merits.

Choked by Gas.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—Matthias Lier was asphyxiated and four other employees were seriously affected that they will probably die by the freezing of a gas main at the Illinois Steel Company's mills at South Chicago to-night. The names of the injured are: James Whiting, aged 22; Frank Hall, aged 20; William Matthews, aged 22; Harry Matthews, aged 18; unknown man.

Four Men Burned.

Denver, Nov. 9.—The Minnesota hotel was almost completely destroyed by fire between 3 30 and 4 o'clock this morning. Four men rooming in the upper portion of the building were suffocated. There were several narrow escapes from the upper portion of the building over the stables occupied by roomers.

When the police and fire department arrived a number of these roomers were hanging out of the windows having been almost suffocated by the volumes of smoke. There were seven men and two women in the building and only four are known to have escaped. The lower portion of the building was occupied by horses and carriages. The upper part is divided into three compartments, one of these was occupied by the roomers referred to, another was used for storing hay and grain and the third was used as stable horses. The horses that were suffocated were those that were kept in the upper portion of the building and their cries while being burned were most painful.

The flames were under control by 4 a. m. but the building was a total wreck owing to the inflammable material with which it was stored. The fire was confined to the upper portion of the building and is probably originated from the upsetting of a lamp. The front of the building was not so badly damaged as at first appeared, but the rear portion is destroyed.

The stables are owned by Smith & Fourbard and their exact location is from No. 1816 to 1820 Lawrence street. Thirty four horses in the second story of the building were burned to death. They were all the family horses of private individuals and valued at from $300 to $500 each. The loss on the building and contents will be in the neighborhood of $30,000.

The names of the men who lost their lives are: Thomas Bowen, 22 years of age, single, home in Peoria, Ill.; George Richards, 26, single, home at Lincoln, Neb.; David Elmore, single, residence unknown; Otto Heltin, consumptive, home in St. Louis, Mo.

It is thought that the remains of two more men are in the ruins.

The Brazilian Troubles.

London, Nov. 9.—A special to the London Times from Rio Janeiro says that the use of codes is forbidden. There is trouble in the province of Rio Grande Do Sul. The telegraph line is cut at Portalegre. The province of Rio Grande Do Sul can place 50,000 German fighting men in the field. If Silverio Martinez should be nominated for president he would possess great influence and Fonseca, even with the Bank of the Republic to sustain him, would be powerless to resist that influence.

A Philadelphia Blaze.

Philadelphia, Nov. 10.—At 1:00 this morning fire was discovered in the wholesale hosiery and woollen goods store of Lippincott & Johnson, 60 Market street. Surrounding property was seriously threatened with destruction, but at this hour, 2:10 a. m., the fire is believed to be under control. The loss will probably reach $50,000.

A New Iron District.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 8.—Deposits of iron ore that promise to rival the rich mines of the Gogebic and Vermilion ranges have been found in a line of hills, twenty miles south of Vermilion and about fifty miles north of Duluth. For several years a few Duluth mining experts have been exploring on the Mesaba range, most of them belonging to a family named Merritt, and they have at last struck great mineral wealth.

Brazilian Affairs.

London, Nov. 9.—Dispatches received here to-day from Pernambuco show that the troubles in Brazil are approaching an acute crisis and there is much anxiety expressed in Brazil and [illegible] regarding the outcome of Fonseca's action in dissolving congress and again assuming the role of dictator which he laid down subsequent to his election as president of the newly formed republic. Many grave doubts are expressed as to the success of this latest political move.

The dispatches received to-day from Pernambuco further state that there is great discontent throughout all the provinces of Brazil.

Weather Indications.

Washington, Nov. 9.—For Colorado: Fair Tuesday, stationary temperature.

THE NEW JAIL

It Will be Proof Against Lynchings, Fires or Escapes.

The county commissioners yesterday received the plans for the new county jail back from Denver where they had been sent to be approved by the state board of charities. The plans provide for a building which will really be an ornament to South Cascade avenue. Built of light sandstone, three stories high with a high slate roof and basement.

In the basement will be storage rooms, a vegetable cellar and a complete heating plant. It will extend under the front part of the building only, leaving the part under the cell room filled with earth, concrete and masonry so that it will be about impossible to dig out.

A short flight of broad stone steps will lead up to the vestibule, which will have an arched entrance closed by handsome iron doors. These are not made very strong, but still they would keep anyone from accidentally straying either in or out. A double door of solid and grated steel will lead to the left into a reception room where the commitment will be examined. The prisoner will then go into a corridor, which runs through the center of the building, and will be taken to the search room, where he will strip and will be introduced to a capacious bath tub while his clothing is being examined for saws and sledge hammers and other mediums of escape. Then, if he is really a desperate character, he will be taken to the strong room in the rear. Here are six cells of the finest steel, separated into threes by a corridor and surrounded by a corridor on every side. Under a floor of steel will be concrete and masonry and earth, so that the most desperate criminal could not get out. This room is in a sort of rear extension, with windows on both sides and in the rear so that the ventilation and lighting will be good.

Just beyond the search room will be a juvenile room, in which boys may be kept, and at the end of the hall is a room for the insane.

In the front, across the hall from the search room and other small cells will be a returning room for witnesses large enough for a bed and for a person to live with some comfort. Next to this will be a room for the guard to live in.

The kitchen will be just back of the reception room and will be fully equipped, with adjoining pantries. It will be so arranged that "trusties" may be brought in to work without danger of their escaping.

The second floor of the building will be reached by an iron stairway in one corner of the corridor. Over the reception room and kitchen will be a female ward with four cells and a bathroom. This ward will be arranged so that the inmates may have privacy together with room to exercise with perfect security.

Next to this and over the main entrance, will be a hospital cell with room for a bed, lighted by two large windows. In the room over the search room at the north side over the guard and search rooms and minor cells will be placed the cells now in the old jail, somewhat remodeled, for the reception of "hobos" and thirty-day culprits. The space over the strong room will be reserved for future use.

The third floor will be reached by a narrow iron stair leading up from the second corridor to a balcony. From this balcony will open out four rooms. In the one over the hospital will be put a solitary cell for very dangerous criminals and those who are in danger of being lynched. It will be so situated that one man can defend it from a large mob and it will be made to resist attacks from both the exterior and interior. Three old steel cells now used upstairs in the old jail will be placed in one of the rooms on this floor but the rest of the space will be left until the growth of the county requires more cells to be placed in the jail.

The building will be so arranged that a man can be brought in and taken to any one of the eight departments without the knowledge of others in the other rooms. In this way the different members of a gang could be brought in and each one kept from knowing that the others were taken or from communicating with each other.

The jail will be fire proof. The floors will all be of concrete, made from broken granite and Portland cement. The floor joists will be iron I beams and arches of corrugated iron will connect them. The space above the arches will be filled with concrete, making altogether a floor that it would be a difficult task to cut through even with the best of tools. The attic floor will be made in this way so that if the only wood in the building, the beams supporting the slate roof should take fire the roof and all could burn up and fall in without endangering the inmates of the jail.

The building will face east on Cascade avenue and will be done by next September. It will cost $38,700.

The Mining Congress.

Denver, Nov. 9.—To the surprise of everyone, the east will have a larger representation in the mining congress than the west. This is due to the active interest taken in mining affairs by eastern capitalists who will seek the adoption of more liberal laws governing the handling of mineral claims and by their presence assist in advancing legislation. Letters from the west scarcely refer to this subject of discussion, it dealt mainly with free silver or the coinage of the American product only. Unless western cities awake to the necessity of sending delegates, the congress will develop some startling features. Already the names of 300 delegates have been received.

Dangerous Electricity.

Shelbyville, Ind., Nov. 9.—The central portion of the town was thrown into a fever of excitement about 5 o'clock this evening by the yells of a man at the entrance of the Hotel Ray, and soon hundreds of people were on the spot. Charley Huffman, a merchant, was the first to arrive and finding William Loudon prostrate on the stone front and gasping for breath, took hold of him to raise him to his feet, when he himself was thrown on his back in the middle of the street. It was in the midst of a heavy storm and it was discovered that the wire [illegible]

Lord Salisbury's Speech at the Lord Mayor's Banquet.

HE WILL HOLD FAST TO EGYPT

Italy and the Pope—Rudini Explains their Relations—A Financial Crisis in Berlin Which Affects Stock Markets.

London, Nov. 9.—Lord Salisbury at a great banquet given by the lord mayor of London last night made his position clear at last that there was no thought of evacuating Egypt was regarded as a direct challenge to Gladstone and that sure which Gladstone had raised at Newcastle. The lord mayor's banquet is a bipartisan affair and ministers usually take the opportunity to drop significant hints of what their policy is to be especially when it is thought to be gratifying to the Tories. Such as most of those present at a lord mayor's banquet generally are. Mr. Gladstone's utterance at Newcastle has been received with such decided disfavor by Liberals as well as Tory that the applause which welcomed Lord Salisbury's emphatic declaration was not a surprise.

Italy and the Pope.

Rome, Nov. 9.—In a speech at Milan today the Marquis di Rudini, the premier, alluding to the Vatican said: "We have in our midst the papacy which sometimes assumes a threatening attitude but its sphere of action is limited to the exercise of spiritual powers, not only by a law which cannot be lightly contravened but also by the almost unanimous consent of those who thought themselves most religious. The country's ecclesiastical policy has now become traditional. The honor and strength of the kingdom of Italy must be scrupulously maintained."

"The deplorable incidents produced by a few short-sighted persons will not make us deviate from that policy. Not for so slight a matter will we raise questions affecting the constitution of the kingdom, nor will we tamper with the immovable statutory law of guarantees the wisdom and expediency of which have been proved by long experience. Italy will not fail in this respect owing to liberty of conscience and religious toleration.

"It is our boast that judge us from the lofty standpoint of the ideal if the laws will protect them on coming to Rome to pay devotion to the pope. Strong in the present and confident in the future we fearlessly guarantee the fullest liberty at Rome."

Continuing the marquis stated that Italy's relations with foreign powers were friendly and that she would do her best to strengthen peace. Italy had renewed her adhesion to the triple alliance in order to guarantee a state of affairs fitted to promote a policy of occupation.

A Financial Crisis.

Berlin, Nov. 9.—So far as known, all the banks have survived the run upon them today. The panicked [illegible] was about P. W. Ermisse in the Leipsiger Strasse. Even's body was paid. Frantic excitement ensued. Early in the afternoon the police had to clear the crowd at some banks. The kaiser ordered hourly reports to be made to him as to the condition of affairs, and at 1 p. m. ministers were debating whether he should summon a council to decide if a general financial inquiry was desirable and [illegible]

The Arabian Rebellion.

Constantinople, Nov. 9.—News from Yemen is very discouraging to the Turkish cause. The rebels have made two assaults on the capital of the province in which the Turkish forces are surrounded, and the last time nearly with success. The sultan is said to be considering whether he will grant the demands of the insurgents, which amount substantially to home rule by a native prince and native judges, under the suzerainty of the sultan and a reduction of the enormous burden of taxation. From present indications, if the sultan does not yield something, he may lose everything in Arabia as the insurgents will not, it is believed, stop short of driving the Turks out of Yemen. The sultan is said to feel more anxious on this subject than on any European question.

Likely for the Germans.

Berlin, Nov. 9.—The Socialists are preparing, it is said, to make a vigorous attack in the reichstag upon any measures proposed in the interest of the kaiser's good health of forming personal morals by law. The kaiser's views are not at all acceptable to the Socialists, who often go him with attempting to assume authority little short of omniscience and altogether unsuited for the present stage of civilization. Between Bismarck and the Socialists all indications point to a lively session in the reichstag.

Chilian Notes.

London, Nov. 9.—A dispatch from Paris to the London Times says that Senor Matte, the Chilian minister, is convinced that Chili will not issue a loan. Senor Matte says that the elections were unlikely, 21 Liberal and 38 Conservative deputies being chosen. The parties meeting privately, had agreed to name Jorge Montt for president. The army should be reduced from 40,000 to 5,000 men.

Loved and Lost.

The love between Robert Browning and his wife was ideal in the true sense of that much abused word. And her death, after a few short years of married life, left the poet inconsolable. To him she remained always the dearest and most lovely of created beings, and her gift seemed to him far greater than his own.

I was traveling in Italy. There were few tourists in my compartment, and all were absorbed in books of revery, until the close of the long, dreamy day. Then it was that the elderly gentleman who had sat by my side without moving his eyes from the landscape, made a comment that invited conversation.

"You are fond of poetry?" he asked, when something in the shifting splendor of the Italian skies evoked from me a Byron couplet.

"Oh yes," I responded. "I love poets and poetry."

The old gentleman grew young, and never shall I forget the wonderful thought and imagery that flowed in a continuous stream from his lips.

"Who are your favorite poets?" he asked abruptly.

I named them and without further comment quoted my favorite poem of Mrs. Browning's. When I had finished my companion resumed his post by the window and did not deign to notice me again.

I was much discomfited. Had I given offense? Before reaching our destination I ventured to say:

"I suspect sir that you do not like Mrs. Browning's poetry."

The dark eyes of the stranger turned pitifully upon me, and he said: "Madam that sonnet is the sweetest and the stinger the most precious gift life has given me. She was my wife."—Cor. Christian Union.

The Sun is responsible for the statement that there is a Denver Democrat who says that it was real mean for the Republicans to hold an election without letting him know about it

Some exception have been taken to the comparison made in Colorado between the votes cast for Mr Finegan and Mr Meier, we would say that these two names were selected simply because they represented the two elements of the fusion ticket. Mr Finegan being supposedly a "labor" candidate and Mr Meier a representative of the regular Democracy

Most amusing was the despatch from Saturday night saying that the navy department in Washington did not believe the report of the blowing up of the Baltimore, because the telegram of Captain Schley, received that morning, gave no intimation that anything of the kind was about to happen The United States expects great things of its representative abroad.

THE WHITE RIVER PARK.

The people of Meeker and other parts of the region of the proposed new national park are making a vigorous protest against the plan. Their views should and doubtless will receive due consideration. The peculiarity of that country is such as to make the exact situation a little difficult of comprehension to those not acquainted with the region. Western Colorado is composed of a high table land sloping from the central mountain range westward into Utah. The surface of this plateau is rolling, it has its hills and valleys, and in some cases mountains rising to a considerable height above the general level of the country. Its altitude is seldom less than 7000 feet, and few of its mountains reach 10,000 feet. It is covered with a thick growth of grass, of varying kinds but all known as bunch grass, and in the greater part of its surface hay could be cut profitably. The region is well timbered, there being numberless groves of aspen and spruce, seldom of large extent, and alternated with open glades, parks of all sizes and shapes in a way which the best landscape gardener might envy. On the plateau are numerous springs, but few running streams, the water sinking into the ground to reappear elsewhere. There are frequent showers in the summer, often hail, and frost every month in the year. The snowfall in the winter is very great, reaching a depth of six to ten feet on the level ground. Whether under such conditions it is possible to engage in profitable farming has not been determined, but some of the people in that region are very sure that they could raise good hay crops and perhaps wheat and roots, without irrigation.

The main streams of the region flow almost directly east and west, the principal ones being the Yampa, the White, the Grand and the Gunnison. The bed of these streams is in all cases from a half mile to a mile lower than the general level of the country. The valley may be twenty miles wide, or it may be only a canon with precipitous sides. Traveling along the stream, perhaps in a valley [illegible] appears like a mountain range, several hundred, or even several thousand feet in height. Yet at its summit one would find himself not on the crest of a ridge, but on the edge of a mesa, from which he might look across the valley to a mesa of equal height upon the other side of the stream. Where the valley is of sufficient width there are a series of natural terraces parallel with the stream rising one behind the other. So far the settlement has been made almost entirely upon the lowlands next to the streams and upon the lowest of the terraces. Doubtless the steepness of the slopes rising to the upper regions, in most cases [illegible] this would seem to have much to [illegible] the experiment of irrigation and agriculture upon the upper plateaus.

The proposed park includes the high lands lying between the White and Grand rivers, (the White river plateau) and also a region extending north across the upper White to the edge of the Yampa valley, and west to the high mountains at the source of these streams.

In addition to the main streams already mentioned are numerous smaller tributaries flowing either to the north or south, and having their supply from the melting snows of the upper plateau It is no uncommon thing to find a number of springs running as much either as cold as through the box to a city lawn, within a short distance along one of these streams. The valleys are narrow, but the soil is of wonderful fertility, the coarse grass reaching sometimes a height of fifteen feet, and the land producing when cultivated surprising quantities of potatoes, wheat and root crops. The tributaries of these secondary streams are usually deep ravines with steeply sloping sides rising a thousand feet or more and covered on the north by grass and on the south by dense thickets of aspens and pine

The narrow strips of fertile land extending up among the higher "flat tops" make one of the principle sources of trouble in the present discussion. If there is only a single stream extending through a township the settled area will be confined to a narrow line of claims along the stream This sparse [illegible] of settlement has been the reason of the delay in the survey of many of the townships, and resulted in one of the most serious objections to the proposed reservation The land laws, though they expressly authorize settlement upon the unsurveyed lands, do not provide for any official recognition of the claims of the settler until the land has been surveyed. It is said by the opponents of the reservation that the lands withdrawn include the claims of the settlers who are upon unsurveyed land. When the settlement was made in good faith, there is certainly injustice in this.

Another objection comes from the cattlemen, and they probably furnish the bulk of the opposition There is no better summer range in the state than the White river plateau, though the heavy snows cover it in the winter So far the custom has been to bring the cattle down to the valleys at the time of the first heavy winter storm and to take them back as soon as the grass starts after the melting snow of the spring There has been a disposition on the part of the cattlemen to gobble the [illegible] means of false entries and other [illegible] which seem to have been [illegible] in the eastern portions of the state [illegible] far from being overstocked [illegible] on account of the difficulty of [illegible] winter feed and the only evidences of settlement are rude cabins in almost inaccessible places which, like the Swiss chalets are abandoned in winter and occupied by the herdsmen in summer There is a disposition on the part of these cattlemen to believe that the establishment of the national reservation would interfere with their business Perhaps it would, but they have not yet presented an argument as to why their claims to the plateau should be considered superior to those of the people of the state of Colorado

We believe that there is a general desire on the part of the people of this state to establish a park of this kind We believe that of the many proposed sites none are more suited for the purposes of a game preserve and a water supply reservation than this region. We are sure that the present time is the right time to begin this reservation and that the people of the state will make a great mistake if they do not secure a benefit which will come much easier now than later on. But there is surely a basis of justice in some of the objections that are being made. We do not understand that either the boundaries of the regulations of the new park are permanently arranged. Certainly the rights of the settlers should be respected and their wishes observed so far as they do not conflict with the interests of the people of the state. It may be best to cut out certain townships from the ones now set aside; it may be wise to add others. If the people of Rio Blanco county will make up their minds that the rest of the state is in real earnest in wanting a reservation of the non-agricultural lands of that region, and will offer their suggestions as to the way in which the best reservation can be secured, they are entitled to, and we believe, will receive respectful consideration from the people of Colorado and the department at Washington. Colorado has none too many fertile acres, and the man would be as barbarous as William the Norman, who would make deer preserves where men might live.

R. W. STEELE.

Leadville Herald-Democrat.

The announcement of the death of Mr. Benjamin W. Steele, editor of the Colorado Springs Gazette, was hardly a surprise to his friends throughout the state. For a long time Mr. Steele has been an invalid, and of late years so feeble that it was with the greatest difficulty he attended to any of the duties of his position. But with calm courage he bore up under his sufferings, and those who met forgot, in the sunshine of his face and the sparkle of his eye, that the shadow of death forever hung darkly over him. Mr. Steele held a position in Colorado journalism, honorable to himself and creditable to the profession of which he was a member. Refined, cultured and dignified himself, his paper reflected these characteristics in its general tone and policy. Being a gentleman in every sense that the word is used, Mr. Steele conducted THE GAZETTE in accordance with the highest principles of integrity and honor, and one instinctively felt that whatever cause he might espouse, his utterances would be marked not only by force and vigor, but by dignity, candor, absence of all offensive personalities, and with that fine discriminating tact, common to men of delicate sensibility, which always led him to avoid his adjectival "as a gentleman, and saved him from those excesses of journalistic vituperation that have so frequently emanated from pens less trenchant than his. Personally Mr. Steele was a most lovable man. No one who ever had the pleasure of meeting this kindly, genial gentleman could help feeling drawn toward him. A man of refined intelligence, the soul of honor, cultured in the highest sense of the word, he attracted men to his side and surrounded himself by a circle of warm and sincere friends who loved, trusted and respected him for his qualities of mind and heart. The influence of Mr. Steele, through his personal magnetism and through the columns of the journal he conducted, was always for good. He never sought distinction as an aggressive reformer, but in a quiet, dignified manner he threw the weight of his paper on the side of what he considered to be the right, and its utterances were never without their weight and effect. In his death the west has lost a high-minded journalist, a man of unblemished integrity and a citizen of unselfish, patriotic and intelligent public spirit. His removal from a sphere of practical usefulness will be sincerely mourned by all who knew and appreciated the value of his work.

A Model Gentleman

Ouray Solid Muldoon.

The death of R. W. Steele which took place at Colorado Springs on Sabbath morning, removes from the press circle in this state one of its brightest, cleanest abler and most respected members. Death resulted from rheumatism of the heart, he having long been a sufferer from that disease for years. Benjamin W. Steele was editor and proprietor of the Colorado Springs Gazette and had been engaged in Colorado journalism for about thirteen years, during which period he made THE GAZETTE from nothing to an enviable position, both as to its success and value of place. The deceased editor was [illegible] from his Woody Ave. residence, was a true and loyal friend, a model gentleman, and one whom it was a pleasure to meet and know. Peace eternal and everlasting to the spirit of a once great and good man.

An Influence for Good

We [illegible] to express our [illegible] which has been sustained in the death of R. W. Steele, for many years editor of the Colorado Springs GAZETTE. The foremost citizen of his town and the ablest editor of this state has laid down the burden of life and gone to his reward. He was a noble, generous, manly man. He was sincere and earnest, and fought to the right, and with his great heart and able intellect he exerted an influence for good which will live forever.

Hassan Ben Ali, of Morocco, is seeking a concession to make a Moroccan exhibit at the exposition. He says he will spend $20,000 in bringing the people, manners, customs, amusements, etc., of his country, and in bringing to Chicago a tribe of Berbers.

THE HIGH SCHOOL CONTRACT.

COLORADO SPRINGS Nov 10, 1891

To the Editor of THE GAZETTE.

In the published report of the bids opened by the High school committee the impression is left upon the public mind that the contract may be awarded to parties outside the city. If so awarded the reasons will have to be very good and unqualified for giving the large sum to be expended this winter to other workmen than those of Colorado Springs. The property of erecting so costly a building as the proposed High school at this dull season in our history can only be justified if at all by employing our own mechanics and mills now in enforced idleness.

All sorts of mechanics are idle, and their poverty affects every merchant They have made this their home and to go away to often to forfeit the savings of years. They have been and are to be taxed for the High school. Its construction therefore is not a private matter.

The loss to Colorado Springs in the past two years by congress being given to outside parties has been great. To day scores of our poorer people would be prosperous if the money had remained here, and yet public work is still being let by our committees to outside contractors. The jail has just gone and the High school hangs in the balance

If given to Denver it will be not because the work will be better for the very best work in this city has been done by local mechanics, nor because it will be cheaper, for how can it be cheaper to carry one the sand and lime—but for some reason stronger than these. What can such a reason be?

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

Paraguay has decided to participate in the Exposition. Barbados, French Guiana, Ceylon and Corea have also joined the list

The upholsterers of Philadelphia have applied for 20,000 square feet of space in the Manufactures building, for a collective exhibit from their several establishments.

The District of Columbia has decided to [illegible] to enable it to make a creditable exhibit at the Fair.

Electricity is to be the motive force in Jackson park during the construction of the buildings. The electric plant has been completed and steam engines must go. This is done in order to remove the fire risk. The saw-mills, used in getting out building material, which have been run by steam are now supplied by electric power, furnished, if desired, night and day. Electrical engineer Sarcsant is preparing with a sixty horse power plant to supply electric motor service. In a few days 300 horse-power will be available

British Guiana has appointed its Royal Agricultural and Commercial society a World's Fair commission to represent the colony, and has appropriated $20,000 for an exhibit. President B. Howell Jones, of the commission, has been made its executive officer. A space of 6000 feet has been requested near that assigned to the Dominion of Canada and other British American colonies, so that a contrast may be made between their exhibits and those of the Latin-American countries.

I. Takaqui and K. Ikeda, two representatives commissioned by the Mikado of Japan, have been in Chicago seeking detailed information concerning the exposition. They were greatly pleased and said their country would make a fine exhibit, and that in it would be a number of the private art treasures of the Mikado.

Day and night shifts of men are now worked on all the exposition buildings.

THE COTTON BLOSSOM CLUB.

Judge Intention White Called Up Before the Members.

During the ceremonies of opening the meeting there was a look on Brother Gardner's face which made many of the members uneasy, and Samuel Shin and Stinsby Watkins concealed themselves behind the stove as much as possible, and betrayed considerable anxiety. They were not called for however. When the preaching had got started the president looked around the hall and said:

"I observe dat Judge Intention White am heah wid us tonight. He will please step dis way."

The judge bobbed up with great alacrity and advanced to the president's desk with a bland smile lighting up his face. About a week ago he invented the theory that the growing of sunflowers would in time make the American people a nearsighted race, and he fully and fondly expected to be praised for it.

"Brudder White," said the president in a very solemn voice, "when I passed frew de postoffice de odder day you was down dar! You was talkin wid an offisial 'bout rentin a box. Has you got 'nuff mail in de las' fo'teen y'ars to light a candle wid?"

"I didn't rent no postoffice box, sah!" stammered the judge in great confusion.

"It wasn't a week ago," continued the president "dat I heard you prophesying who would be de presidential candydates for de next campaign. Has you got a pinter on pollytics, judge?"

"N-no, sah no, sah! I was jist guess in at it."

"An a day or two arter dat," said the president, "I heard you talkin 'bout de tariff You was flingin your arms about an talkin in a loud voice, an you made de crowd believe dat you knowed tariff from beginnin to end."

"I was jis talkin, sah. I didn't dun mean nuffin by it."

"Judge White, I was pleased to hev you jine dis club, bekase you weigh 190 pounds an kin play beautifully on de accordion, but I want to warn you dat you has bin gwine too far. From dis time out you let pollyticks alone. One job of whitewashin will pay yo' better than fifty jobs of pollyticks."

"I knows it, sah—I knows it."

"De tariff question am a great question. It has boddered the brains of heaps of white men till dey dun went crazy, an went off in de woods an got lost. Two shillins in cash in your pocket will do yo' mo' good dan six weeks' talk on de tariff."

"Sartainly, sah sartainly"

"An a word about theories, je lge. I am told dat you are a great hand to invent theories. One week you come out wid a theory dat de world am flat as a pancake, an at week on hev it as round as an apple, de third week bumps it up in de middle, an afore de month is out you can go down an see it all up."

"He gave [illegible] replied the judge, as he shifted about in an uneasy way.

"Dat's right. Some of dese white men wan wid a million dollars kin afford to spend a few cents to invent theories, but we poor cuss of niks can't do it. We jis gib de money mind up wid it, an profitable enough we make out of it. We can't jis set down an keep our mouf [illegible]

WASHINGTON GOSSIP.

A MAN WHO DECLINED TO BE SECRETARY OF WAR.

Enormous Amount of Drudgery Expected of a Cabinet Minister—Mr. Blaine at His Desk Again—The Washington Press Club—Other Matters.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Here at the national capital we are just now in a state of expectancy. We are looking forward to great things in the near future—the speakership contest, the organization of a new supreme court for every inch of soil in the United States, the meeting of a new and rather picturesque house of representatives, the appearance of the farmer in the halls of national legislation, the formation of the lines for the great presidential struggle of next year, possible changes in the cabinet and enough other matters of prime importance and interest to keep us who are so unfortunate as to be [illegible] constantly on the alert and to give our pens an abundance of material to work upon.

It is refreshing once in awhile to meet a man strong enough to decline a seat in the cabinet. I met one of this sort the other day, who had had a talk with the president in which General Harrison suggested to him that if he wanted to be secretary of war to sue out Mr Proctor possibly the matter could be arranged What my friend and to the president I do not know, but he told me that he was not ambitious to become a cabinet minister in a department in which his sole duty was to sit behind a desk and sign the letters presented to him by army officers and civilian subordinates. This pretty accurately describes the functions of a secretary of war, and was to the man who goes into that office expecting and endeavoring to have things run in his own way. The first essential in a successful secretary of war is absolute self abnegation. The secretary who is satisfied to sign the letters presented to him without asking too many questions and who does not interfere with the measured dignity of the routine of affairs by the impertinence of suggestions of his own, will get along first rate. I was talking with an army officer who told me that the present secretary of war was somewhat unpopular in the army. "And why, pray?" I asked. "Oh, he has had the audacity to presume that he had the right to give some directions in army affairs." This reply was made in all seriousness, and for some time the officer was unable to see what I was laughing at.

This signing of public letters is one of the minutiae of office holding in Washington. Originally the law required nearly all the letters sent out from the great departments to be signed by the heads thereof, but as the government has grown in magnitude and diversity changes have been found imperative, and hundreds of thousands of letters formerly signed by department heads are now signed by the heads of bureaus and chiefs of divisions. But enough remain to make the daily task a formidable one for every member of the cabinet. Secretary Foster usually begins to work on his mail about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Huge bundles of letters are brought in by the clerks, and a messenger stands by his side and removes the sheets one by one as the signature is affixed. Of course the secretary does not stop to read the letters. He has about as much knowledge of their contents as the charwoman who is sitting in the lower corridor waiting to begin her daily work of cleaning out the office. He supposes the letters to be official business, but if a waggish clerk wanted to ring in on the secretary a document declaring that the Republican party is a failure or a check for $100,000 Mr. Foster wouldn't know the difference, and would sign it along with the others. As a matter of fact the secretary usually signs his mail and talks to his newspaper callers at the same time. It is difficult to tell which are more numerous, the letters or the correspondents, and between the two the secretary is lucky if he gets through and away to dinner at 6.

In some respects Mr. Foster is an ideal cabinet officer. He has the training of a business man, and a successful business man's faculty for making quick decisions. He knows how to say yes or no, particularly no, without hemming and hawing about it, and that is a great thing. One of his rules is to clean up all the business that comes to his desk every day, never leaving anything over for the morrow, and since he has been in the treasury he has not once failed to live up to his principle. People who are not familiar with the workings of the government departments would be surprised to see the amount of drudgery of a clerical nature which cabinet ministers have to go through every day. My friend who didn't want to sit down and preside over a desk while the other fellows managed his department of war, has a very acute mind. All through the departments this signing of letters is going on every day from 3 to 4, and often to 5 or 6 o'clock. It is estimated that 50,000 letters a day go out of the treasury department, and nearly as many out of the interior department. Of course Secretaries Foster and Noble do not sign all of these. Even in the state department there are many letters to sign, and Chief Clerk Brown told me that the first day Secretary Blaine was in his office after his long summer vacation he signed 500 letters, "and every signature," the chief clerk added, "was as bold and firm as one could care to see it."

Mr. Blaine is a marvelous man in more ways than one. He is an enigma mentally and physically I was talking about this to one of his friends who has known him intimately for many years "I am not surprised," said this gentleman, "that when Mr. Blaine came to Washington from Bar Harbor, two weeks ago the newspaper correspondents who were at the station to meet him and size him up were led to believe by what they saw that the secretary was in a very weak condition In all probability he had that appearance, though you tell me you saw him the second morning after his arrival walking from his residence over to the White House, with head up and legs swinging like an athlete out for his morning exercise These sudden and inexplicable changes are characteristic of Mr Blaine. I remember during the campaign of 1884 I was detailed by the committee to escort Mr Blaine from New York over to Newark where he was to make a speech Chauncey M. Depew was with us and we travelled in a parlor car. We had no sooner left Jersey City than Mr Blaine lopped down on one of the couches and appeared to be as tired almost unto death His eyes became dull and glassy, his jaw fell, his under lip hung low and tremulous, and he appeared to be in a state of alarming weakness or coma

"Both Mr. Jones and myself were frightened. 'For heaven's sake' said Mr Jones, 'find a physician or some brandy or something, or we shall have a dead man on our hands before we get to Newark.' We found neither physician nor stimulants, and Mr Blaine continued in this peculiar condition with all his mental and physical faculties in a state of relapse, which greatly resembled collapse, until we reached the outskirts of Newark and we heard the campaign bands braying. As soon as Mr. Blaine heard the music and understood its significance he straightened up, rubbed his eyes, pulled himself together, and ten minutes later walked out like a drum major, erect, alert, springy, proud and strong, and made one of the finest and most vigorous speeches of his life. That is Blaine all through, and I am told that to this day he continues to alarm and then amaze those who are near him by his sudden transitions from one extreme to the other."

Speaking of newspaper men sizing up Mr. Blaine reminds me that we have now in Washington a sort of ring in which we place new public men so that the correspondents of the press may gather around and size them up. I speak of the Press club. As soon as a new public figure, or an old one for that matter, comes to town, some newspaper man takes him in tow and introduces him at the club. Twenty or thirty scribes surround him, and if the man has any hopes of future greatness or fame as an intellectual quantity this is a good time for him to show the sort of stuff he is made of. This is an inspection in which bogus goods cannot be palmed off. If the people who sent the man hither have mistaken a scheming demagogue for a statesman, and a shy but shallow politician for a man of brains, be sure these sharp eyed newspaper men will find him out. Probably no public man new to the Washington field has made a better impression on these critics of the press than old General Palmer, the new senator from Illinois. Though almost seventy-five years old, General Palmer showed the scribes that he was the equal of the best of them in wit, memory, anecdote and argument. A ruddy, cheery, happy old man is General Palmer, with the experience and wisdom of three quarters of a century and the vigor and brightness of young manhood. This is a rare combination, and we all look to see this phenomenal man make his mark in the senate at an age when most men are in the sear and yellow leaf of decay.

The Press club at Washington has become one of the most popular resorts of the capital. Statesmen are eager to gain admission to its sacred precincts and esteem it a great favor when some friend of the guild secures for them a visitor's card or introduces them for a day. A laughable incident occurred a few days ago in the rooms of this club, which for twenty years were used as a public gambling house. A prominent man from a distant state, who used to be in congress and who now occupies a high official position at his home, strayed into the clubhouse, where it was evident he had been a frequent visitor in the old days and walked up to a long table at which a number of newspaper men sat playing the club's favorite game dominoes He looked on for a moment, a look of disgust on his face, and finally exclaimed, "Gentlemen, please tell me where the tiger is I want to play in a stack or two of chips on him" He was assured that there was no faro or other gambling in the house "What, no faro! he snorted; "nothing but domoes in the national capital! Shades of Daniel Webster and Henry Clay, into what degenerate days we have fallen!"

The approach of winter does not appear to diminish the tennis enthusiasm of the members of the diplomatic corps They go right on playing as if a midsummer sun was still shining Never before was there such a tennis craze in the corps as there has been during the last six months. Even Sir Julian Pauncefote, the suave British minister, who is much more than forty and rather fat, puts on a white tennis suit every afternoon and goes out and bats the balls and hops and jumps around as lively as any of the youngsters. Sir Julian must have passed the threescore post some years ago, but they say he plays a very good game of tennis.

Yesterday morning about half of the women of Washington rushed for the morning papers before they had completed their toilets. They want to know if Major McKinley had been elected governor of Ohio. Whenever the major runs for office the women of Washington, irrespective of party or politics, are on his side They talk for him, hope for him and some of them pray for him That they do so is to their credit and to the major's too. Their interest in him is not that which their sex is usually supposed to display in a gallant or handsome man, but genuine love for him because of his tender devotion to his invalid and at times helpless wife. If the women of the country could vote I think Mr. McKinley could be elected president or anything else, and an Ohio man who was here a few days before election told me that the friendly influence of the women out there, in Democratic as well as Republican households, was a strong factor in the situation.

LIFE ON A MAN-OF-WAR.

A TIMELY TOPIC IN CONNECTION WITH THE CHILIAN DIFFICULTY.

The Equipment of the Cruiser Boston Now En Route for Valparaiso — How Captain Wiltse's Gallant Crew Will Get in Trim for Possible Conflict.

(Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association.)

IT IS only a few weeks ago that the United States cruiser Yorktown received orders to sail for Valparaiso. Since then the foreign department at Washington has received news from Captain Schley, commanding the Baltimore, of the Pacific station, that some of his sailors have been murdered and that the lives and property of American subjects are no longer safe in Chili; consequently the United States cruiser Boston, under the command of Captain Gilbert C. Wiltse, has been dispatched with a complement of 26 officers and 272 men to the scene of the trouble.

Though in modern days a man-of-war is nearly always kept in fighting trim, or can at least prepare for action in a very short time, yet there is a great difference between the outfit she receives when going on a peaceable cruise and one for war.

Both the Yorktown and the Boston were prepared for the latter purpose before leaving the Brooklyn navy yard, and they have sailed with a full complement of men, and with their ammunition magazine, provision store and coal bunkers stocked to the utmost capacity. This is necessary to make the vessel as independent as possible during the time of her commission. It is not always possible to obtain provisions, coal or ammunition in foreign waters, especially when closely watched by the enemy. Few people can have an idea what it means for a vessel like the Boston to take stores for a whole year. There are 300 jack tars on board, and each of them has an appetite almost equal to that of two ordinary landsmen. Here is a list of the provisions which the Boston needs for a twelve-month:

Ninety-four thousand five hundred pounds of biscuits, 26,200 pounds of salt beef, 15,700 pounds of salt pork, 23,400 pounds of preserved meats, 18,400 pounds of flour, 13,050 pounds of coffee and cocoa, 7,800 pounds of rice, 5,300 pounds of butter, 3,000 pounds of dried fruit, 3,900 pounds of pickles, 23,400 pints of beans and peas, 27,300 pounds of sugar, 3,412 pounds of tea, 3,900 pints of molasses, 7,800 pints of vinegar.

The total cost of the above amounts to about $34,000. This, however, is only what the crew eats, but to it not less than $70,000 worth of coal, which the engines will devour in a year, must be added, and another $30,000 for ammunition, so there is a nice total of $134,000 for the food of the crew, the engines and guns. The pay roll will be about $132,000, and the wear and tear of the vessel may well be estimated at $43,000, or all in all $309,000 for one year's commission.

Naturally no man-of-war can carry all the coal she needs for months, but before going into action she takes on board as much as she possibly can stow. Filled coal bunkers in unarmored cruisers of the Boston class afford a fairly good side protection for the engine and boiler room, while the deck protection over them generally consists of strong steel plates varying from 1½ to 3½ inches in thickness. During the long cruise of 11,000 miles, which is the distance from New York to Valparaiso, the Boston will have to coal at various places and ultimately at Sandpoint, in the straits, where she will take all the coal she can carry, namely, 300 tons. Whenever in port the men are supplied with fresh provisions from shore and nothing is taken from the stores. This is done to give a variety to the monotonous bill of fare on a man-of-war.

It is hardly possible to describe the privations men will endure when a high aim, such as the glory of their flag, is constantly before them. Jack may grumble at home, but when abroad there is no man prouder of his country than he. This is even the case in peace, but much more so in war. Then he is conscious that the eyes of his country are constantly and anxiously watching every movement of his vessel, and Jack and his ship are one.

During the Boston's voyage life on board will chiefly consist of the regular everyday man-of-war routine, namely, eight hours work out of twenty-four, besides a little gun and rifle practice, and occasionally some extra duty when gales blow hard and old Neptune, getting angry, furiously beats the waters with his mighty trident.

CAPTAIN GILBERT C. WILTSE.

After the ship has left Sandpoint and is approaching her destination the duty on board will increase, but then Jack does not care for that; his mind is excited, and in his eagerness to join the enemy he will forget the extra strain on his daily existence. When off duty the men will gravely discuss the situation, give various opinions on the different ways in which it would be best to tackle the enemy, and invariably arrive at the conclusion that the latter some way or other is sure to have the worst of it, for he can have no chance against Jack on his own vessel.

The Boston is not a cruiser of the latest type; she, the Dolphin, the Atlanta and Chicago formed the nucleus of Uncle Sam's new navy. Consequently she has no real military mast armed with rapid firing guns, but is like most of the old wooden cruisers, brig rigged, and carries about 20,000 square feet of sail. Her sails do not help her much, however, for with all her canvas spread and her machinery disabled she would not be able to make more than [illegible] miles an hour, while her actual speed proved from steam power is 15½ knots. Before appearing in the scene of action a great deal of her rigging will be taken down and her masts, as far as possible, dismantled and stored away. Most of her officers will be taken from their davits and placed above deck or stored where they cannot interfere with the aiming of the guns and the maneuvers of her crew. In olden times captains usually sank their prizes before going into action, but this is not done any longer, except in cases where there is no room on board.

The deck of a man-of-war prepared for action looks much more like the inner harbor of a fort than like a vessel's deck. The Boston carries two 8-inch guns on her bows, three 6-inch guns on her starboard and an equal number of 6-inch guns on her port side. For the training of these guns forty men are needed. Besides these she has eleven rapid firing and machine guns which require the service of twenty-five additional men. These men, with an equal number of reserves, have no other duty to perform except to take care of the guns. It goes without saying that when the Boston will be lying before Valparaiso half her crew will always be on duty while the other half are resting. Her guns will be all loaded and a small number of shells piled near them for immediate use, while another supply will be placed on her lower decks.

The ammunition magazine and the engine and boiler room are in every man-of-war the best protected parts of the ship, and the hatchways leading to them are kept closed while the fight is raging, for a single shell may explode the former or disable the latter, and in both cases ship and men are doomed. Every officer and man on board has his station should it become necessary to open fire. At night, the time when torpedo attacks are most likely to be made, the torpedo nets are lowered and the electric search light kept playing in every direction. On the watchfulness and vigilance of the sentries depends the safety of ship and crew, and any negligence of duty by men or officers in this direction is punished with the utmost severity. This, however, hardly ever happens, for Jack knows well that no is watching for his own life.

Whenever fire is opened the captain, who in time of peace does little or no actual routine service, steps on the bridge and takes command. Nothing is done except he orders it. Every movement of the vessel and the firing of every gun depends on his word of command. Near him stands the executive officer, the navigating officer and his aids. There is no shouting, no confusion, for every man knows or is told what he has to do. Some men are designated to train the guns, others to fire them, there are men to carry ammunition and others to take care of the wounded and the dead. To board an enemy's vessel nowadays is almost an impossibility on account of the large number of machine guns on every warship afloat. All that can and must be done is to kill as many as possible of the crew, disable the vessel or, better still, sink her.

When a vessel carries torpedoes the service on board becomes more complicated, as in this case night attacks will be often attempted for the purpose of destroying as many vessels as possible of the enemy's fleet. The latest improved torpedoes, however, have only a range of 500 yards, and consequently make it necessary for the attacking vessel to approach the enemy at such close quarters that even musketry fire becomes effective, not to speak of the havoc of machine guns. Only dark nights are chosen for such attacks. All lights are extinguished on board, and after the position of the enemy has been ascertained the attacking vessel steams slowly up to her. No noise must be made, and every word of command is therefore given in a low tone of voice until the vessel has come within the proper torpedo range. Once the death dealing missile is fired the position of the attacking vessel, of course, is revealed to the enemy, who in turn responds with a hail of shell and bullets. It is in such moments that Jack is placed on his mettle and is obliged to keep cool, for confusion, dangerous as it is in daytime, becomes doubly so during the night.

Regarding the wounded, it may be said that whenever there are several surgeons one will attend to them on deck, while the rest, comparatively safe in the cockpit, will perform their duty there. The men who have to carry the wounded have a no less dangerous duty to perform than those who are combatants, they are quite as much exposed to the deadly fire on deck without having the satisfaction of taking active part in it or returning shot for shot.

The New Portrait of the Pope.

The greatest men are not always the best subjects for portrait painters. M. Chartran, the Parisian artist, who received the commission to put Pope Leo's likeness on canvas had much trouble to persuade his holiness to endure the tedium of posing. He has represented Leo XIII. seated in a red armchair, his hands resting on the arms, while one foot in a red slipper peeps out on a red cushion. A red mantle drapes his holiness' shoulders, and a diamond and sapphire ring and a pontifical cross on his breast relieve the pale white costume. The portrait is to be engraved for the benefit of the faithful.

What Actors Have to Put Up With.

The public, seated in comfortable chairs at the theater, has no idea of the meager ideas of the accommodations provided behind the scenes for the actors and actresses who take part in the play. In nine cases out of ten theatrical dressing rooms, even those occupied by the principal members of the company, are ridiculously small and ill ventilated, and often they are dirty. One leading woman in the company of a famous female star says that in no one of the ten theaters she has visited this season has she had comfortable quarters. In four of the ten, her dressing rooms were wholly without windows. In one instance she was forced every night during the play to stand five minutes in the wings, where a door opening on the street let a current of cold air in on her every minute or two. What made this more disagreeable and dangerous to her health was that at that time in the play she wears a low necked ball dress.

An Unfortunate English Actress.

The recent disastrous failure of Miss Eastlake's American tour will perhaps be a warning to other English actors and actresses who have an idea that in order to make money in America they need only to announce that they are English. Miss Eastlake showed herself to be an actress of considerable capability when she visited this country as Wilson Barrett's leading woman, yet her tour was a stay here lasted almost before it began, and failed so completely that stories were told about members of her company actually suffering from privation in Philadelphia. George Barrett, an English actor of note, who tried America this fall, also lost money. It really looks as if the people of the United States had decided to encourage their countrymen at the expense of visitors from abroad. If this is true, it will be a good thing for the American stage.

The Gold Dog, the Bad Woman.

A gentleman fond of animals had a pet dog, which his wife, who hated dogs, detested and banished whenever it entered the drawing room. One day as she was sitting there the dog marched in and lay down before the fire. The lady turned him out. The dog, supposing that she was afraid of his dirtying the room, brought a clinker from the kitchen, deposited it on the rug and lay down upon it. The brute of a woman ended by having him kicked out. Journal of Emily Shore.

SPORTING NOTES.

Albert, alias E. R. Leonard, the young man who made such a good showing in the recent bicycle tournament at New York, is said to be Crozier, the pedestrian. He has been running as an amateur of late.

Since his disqualification at the Berkeley A. C. games the English walker, Harry Curtis, is said to strongly meditate returning home.

Walter C. Dohm is now conceded to be the swiftest middle distance runner in the world at present in training.

The Metropolitan association, Amateur Athletic union, boxing championships will be held at New York Dec. 5.

Harry Jewett, the famous Detroit sprinter, has a magnificent physical development. He is looked upon as one of the coming runners.

COLLEGE KICKERS.

THE THREE BIG TEAMS COMPARED

Harvard Is Weak in the Center, Yale Lacks Good Kickers and Princeton's Line Might Be Strengthened with Advantage—All Is to Be Easy Are Evenly Matched.

Were the [illegible] Princeton to meet [illegible] week for the [illegible] championship [illegible] would defeat [illegible] Yale [illegible] Harvard and Princeton [illegible] over the western [illegible] Princeton.

Comparing [illegible] results with [illegible] age of Yale [illegible] 1890, that Harvard [illegible] the victorious eleven [illegible] Yale.

YALE PLAYERS.

HARWELL. MORISON. MCCLUNG. HELLEBRINGER.

Princeton's is an improvement. It must be remembered, however, that Harvard beat Yale at Springfield, Mass., last November by a score of 10 to 6, which Yale in turn defeated Princeton by the crushing score of 32 to 0. Harvard and Princeton did not meet.

Of Harvard's eleven of 1890, five players remain at Cambridge—Captain Trafford, full back; Lake and Corbett, half backs, and Hallowell and Newell, rushers.

Behind the line Harvard will be very strong. How well Captain Trafford kicks every one knows, and in his position he will call play either of his opponents. Lake and Corbett form the greatest pair of line breaking half backs in the country, and even if the faculty should not allow the latter to play, either White, the intercollegiate one mile champion, or Sherwin would prove an acceptable substitute. Burgess and Gage, the candidates for quarter back, leave much to be desired compared with Dean, of last year's team, but, then, Harvard men think Dean the greatest quarter back that ever lived.

The right end of the rush line and right tackle will be well cared for by Hallowell and Newell. D. Shea, a good offensive player, will probably play an excellent game at left tackle, though Grant, an old Exeter man, will probably work hard to secure the position. For left end there are several candidates, the most promising of whom are Emmons, Collamore and Bond. All three are good players, but they labor under the disadvantage of having their work compared with the brilliant, dashing play of Captain Cunnock of last year's team.

It is in the middle of the line that Harvard is weak. None of the candidates for center or guard has had much experience. But W. H. Shea, the shot putter, with his 200 pounds avoirdupois, or Bangs or Mackie should compare well with Paine, of Yale, or Symmes, of Princeton—neither of the latter being particularly brilliant. It is at guard that the rub comes, for the unfortunates who fill these positions will have a sorry time of it with the redoubtable Hellebringer and S. Morison, of Yale, or Riggs of Princeton. Vail, No. 6 in the crew, and Barr are about the best men now trying for the places. With such a trio in the middle of the line it seems that this will be the objective point of Yale and Princeton's attacks.

A PRINCETON TRIO.

WADLEY. SYMMES. RIGGS.

Yale is fortunate this year in that nearly all her old players are still in college. In fact there are but three positions on the team to be filled by new men center, right tackle and full back. Hellebringer, a most brilliant, and Morison, the most steady guard on the field, will play in their old places. Wallis, almost a second Gill, will play left tackle, and Harwell and Crosby will probably be left and right end respectively, though there is any amount of competition for these places. Barbour will fill his old position as quarter back, steadying the other players when necessary, by his coolness, and Captain McClung, the line breaker, and Bliss, the dodger, will do the work at half.

Paine, who rowed No. 4 in the crew, is almost sure to be Yale's center rusher. He is a powerful young fellow, with lots of weight but little experience. He will get lots of coaching, but the position will probably be the weakest spot in Yale's line. For the other vacant position among the forwards there are so many good candidates that the position is sure to be well filled. Mills, a substitute of last year's eleven, will probably make it.

At full back Yale has thus far this season been lamentably weak. Noyes will no doubt make the position in spite of his lack of steadiness.

Princeton's strength lies behind the line. Homans, the full back, has been unable to play for some time, owing to an injured ankle. When he returns to the field, J. Poe, a smaller brother of small Edgar A., who has been playing full back, will move up to half, and King will probably go to quarter. Adams will be the other half back.

The rush line, like last year's, will be light. Riggs at left guard and Warren on the right end are first class men, and can hold their own with any opponents. Symmes, the short, heavy center, should also show up fairly well, as he has had some experience in his position and will not have a particularly strong man to play against. Harold and Davis, right and left tacklers; Dowkont, right guard, and Vincent, left end, are now men on the varsity, and can hardly cope with the more experienced players from Cambridge and New Haven.

Princeton's greatest strength will be shown when she has the ball. She has several good ground gainers and her backs are active and alert. Their weakness is in fumbling. When it comes to defensive playing, however, the Jerseymen seem to be outclassed.

To sum up, Harvard is strong behind the line and strong on the ends, but weak in the center. Yale is very strong in the line, but very weak in the kicking department, and Princeton is very weak in the line, but strong behind.

With teams of such generally even strength, approaching games especially that between Princeton and Yale on Thanksgiving day—are looked forward to with intense interest by all who are "up" in football.

HIGH PRICED HORSES.

St. Blaise Sold for $100,000, While Nancy Hanks Brought $15,000.

One hundred thousand dollars for a horse! That was the price recently paid for the imported stallion, St. Blaise, by Charles Reed, the Tennessee turfman, at the sale of the late August Belmont stud. It was the highest price ever paid for a thoroughbred stallion, and Mr. Reed expects to, and probably will, in getting back the large sum of money back. In stud fees and in the sale of the get of the sire, St. Blaise.

The other day, too, J. Malcolm Forbes, of Boston, paid about $5,000 for Nancy Hanks, the great trotter whose time by 2:09 is a menace to Nancy's world's honors. Nancy Hanks brought the highest price ever paid for a mare. Sunol, $41,000, comes next, with Maud S. $40,000 third.

Stallions of reputation as trotters, runners or breeders have always brought the highest prices. Among the runners, Orlando and Duke of [illegible] brought $50,000. Of the trotting stallions, Axtell passed from C. W. Williams' hands for over $100,000 and C. H. Nelson's record that sum for the dethroned turf king Nelson. It was said [illegible] that Stamboul was refused for [illegible] 2-year-old Monbars.

NANCY HANKS.

St. Blaise is an English Derby winner, and was brought to America by Mr. Belmont. The get of St. Blaise—Potomac, La Tosca and St. Florian—have all been big money winners. There is not only a fortune in a successful runner, trotter or pacer, but there is also a fortune to be got out of him in the racing world. Tenny won $80,000 on the Brooklyn handicap of 1891. His Highness is only a 2 year-old, but during the season past he won $107,595. These facts and the fact that a St. Blaise youngster sold for $60,000, show why turfmen who think they know a good investment are willing to pay $100,000 for such a sire as St. Blaise.

Sandow's Remarkable Feat.

One of the new feats of the German strong man, Eugene Sandow, is called "supporting an orchestra." As the illustration in this article shows, Sandow holds in the air a piano, a pianist and three other musicians, who play while in that position.

SANDOW SUPPORTING AN ORCHESTRA.

Sandow also lifts a horse above his head, after the animal has been raised several feet from the ground by tackle. The horse is only a pony, but there is no mistaking his weight. Another of the German Hercules' new feats is turning a somersault with a fifty-six pound dumbbell in each hand.

Probably the Oldest Smoker.

A Pole named Stanislas Zaleski has just died at Bordeaux whose birth certificate shows that he was born at Warsaw in 1769. He was a collector of pipes and an inveterate smoker. His memory remained clear almost to the end.

A DAY IN DENVER

In order to secure it take the Santa Fe train at 4.25 or 8.05 a. m., which will give you almost the whole day in Denver. Trains returning leave at 9.00 and 1.30 and 11.30 p. m.

A FEW REASONS

Why the "WABASH" is the most desirable route for all points East

First—You can purchase through tickets for all Eastern points at any coupon ticket office in the best city with the lowest rates on routes to the Missouri River.

Second—You can do it by way of Omaha or Kansas City at your pleasure.

Third—From either of those points you can have your choice of "FIVE" distinct routes as follows:

Via the Hannibal Air Line, which is the short line to the East.

Via St. Louis, where close connection is made with all Eastern and Southeastern routes.

Via Chicago, the World's Fair City sometimes called "the windy city."

Via Toledo, Ohio's great inland city, connecting at that place with the Lake Shore fast trains to the East.

Via Detroit, Michigan's prettiest and most beautiful city where Eastern lines converge closely.

All of the above named points are reached direct only by the "WABASH" and direct by no other line running from the West.

Ask for your tickets by the way of this line, and accept of them by no other.

We run the finest trains on earth, a solid section but a cold fact. Write me for rates, maps, etc.

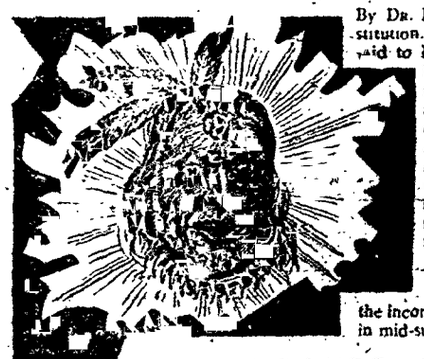
THE MARVELOUS MOQUI SNAKE DANCE



By DR. R. W. SHUFELDT, of the Smithsonian Institution. Illustrated from photographs which are said to be the only ones ever made. All of our illustrations are made direct from photo. negatives, hence are absolutely true. This article is illustrated showing The Beginning of the Dance, Handling Live Rattle Snakes, Hualpi, where the dance was held, and Moqui Indian Girl. The above is but one of the many articles and illustrations, the special feature of the OCTOBER Great Divide will be its Art Supplement, an Aquerelle in seven colors, suitable for framing, of

TWENTY GEMSTONES

Cut and polished for jewelry mounting

ALL FREE WITH THE GREAT DIVIDE

These Gemstones are as follows: Cameo, Coldstone, Tiger Eye, Sard-Onyx, Fancy Cameo-lites, Ribbon Agate, Carnelian, Jewel Agate, Satin Spar (the peer of Moonstone), Montana Moss Agate, Agate for sleeve buttons, Green Moss Agate, Striped Agate for ladies' brooch, Petrified Wood, etc., given free as a premium to each new yearly subscriber, if $1.00, price of yearly subscription, is sent within 30 days of the date of this journal. Each Gemstone is honestly worth 50 cents, and some cannot be bought for $1 each of any jeweler, and the total value is over $10. You naturally say, "Can this be true?" We positively guarantee to refund your money if you are not fully satisfied. Our reason for offering this costly premium is:

We must advertise in order to get others to advertise with us, and by this method we will have a national circulation quicker than by any other way that we know of, and our conclusions are invariably by experiments.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS are Literateurs, Plain People, Scouts, Cowboys, Miners, Indians, in other words, people familiar with what they write, and who tell their stories in their own quaint way. You cannot afford to miss this.

MARVELOUS as this inducement seems, you may rest assured it is genuine, or the publishers of this magazine would not print this advertisement; therefore send $1.00 today for a year's subscription, and the twenty Gemstones will be sent the same day your order is received; or, if you prefer, your newsdealer will get it for you. Sample copy, 10 cents. Always address

THE GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1891.

Mr. and Mrs. McGraw and Mr. and Mrs. Compo of Detroit, Mich., are visitors in the city

Two ping wrenches were lost during the fire Sunday night that the fire chief would like returned

A young man named Drake has been arrested at Colorado City on suspicion of passing counterfeit coin

The M. E. church, South, will give a Sunday school concert next Friday evening at the church corner Weber and Cucharras streets

The stock of the Crazy Ox Bros. was sold yesterday [illegible] bringing $1,000 [illegible] F. L. Rouse, the principal [illegible]

C. E. Burton from near Edgerton made final proof on his homestead in the county court yesterday. Jas. E. Wiley of Falcon made his final proof in the district court yesterday

There will be a regular monthly meeting of Colorado Springs chapter No. 6, R. A. M. tonight. Association of the Mark Masters degree. Craftsmen and others are cordially invited.

The next regular meeting of the Colorado College Scientific society will be held at Palmer hall this evening at 7 o'clock. Paper by Dr. Mustard. "The Delphin Classics." Prof. Hill. Note on the Ordinance of 1787

At the school board meeting on Saturday Mr. John W. Green was unanimously elected to fill the position of secretary. This is a selection that will meet with the approval of the citizens in general no doubt, as Mr. Green is fully qualified and is a young man of sterling integrity.

The members of the El Paso club are already anticipating the day when they will get into their new club house. This it is hoped will be in about six weeks at the farthest. The club is in the most prosperous era of its history, and the rooms are filled each evening. Nine new members were elected last evening.

Gilmore's band of fifty two people will arrive in the city this morning on a special train over the Colorado Midland. They come direct from Salt Lake City. They will appear at the opera house this afternoon and evening in two grand concerts with an entire change of programme. The matinee will begin at 2.30 and the evening concert at 8.15 p. m.

THE GAZETTE this morning presents the figures for the official count of the vote of El Paso county, for the election Nov. 3, 1891. County clerk Howbert, assisted by Justice Patton of Fountain, and Justice Wiley of Falcon, made the count yesterday. About 40 per cent of the books contained clerical errors and will have to be sent back for correction to the judges.

Mr. E. Bagett of The Antlers, is now en route from a trip east and yesterday stopped at Dwight, Ill., to make an investigation of Dr. Keeley's gold cure for the parties in this city who are preparing to buy the rights for the use of the drug. Two telegrams were received from him yesterday that were very enthusiastic. He declares it a sure cure and a wonderful discovery.

Mr. D. H. Rupp, of the firm of Weir & Rupp, of Manitou, will leave next week for Cambridge, Mass., where he will take a special course at Harvard University. Mr. Rupp is one of the most enterprising young men in Manitou and during his six year's residence there he has secured the entire confidence of the business community. He will continue his connection with the firm and expects to return in the spring.

Mr. Frank L. Tuttor, notary public and Mr. J. M. Hawkins, attorney-at-law; two enterprising young men of this city, have organized the Colorado Springs collection agency. They propose to relieve business houses of this city of the care and trouble of collecting their accounts or employing a collector. They have already secured the collecting for a number of houses and are at work. They are located in room 11 of the First National bank building

The annual meetings of the El Paso County Bible society were held in the First Presbyterian, First M. E. and First Baptist churches Sunday evening and were very interesting. Addresses of interest were delivered at each church. The collections for the society amounted to $30.50. Officers were elected for the year as follows: Rev. M. D. Ormes, president; T. P. Barber, secretary; Geo. B. Perry, treasurer. An executive committee of one from each church will be appointed.

The New Capitol.

Hon. B. F. Crowell, of this city, one of the state capitol commission, is very greatly pleased with the large vote given the bonds for the capitol building at the late election, and especially with the handsome vote given in El Paso county. As organized the capitol commission is now a safe, reliable body of men in whom the people have confidence and the large vote is in the nature of an endorsement of them. More money could have been secured just as easily and the bonds should have been for $500,000 instead of $300,000. Mr. Crowell says that with this money the building can now be erected, enclosed and the dome built. More money will be required hereafter to finish the interior and put the grounds in order. When completed the capitol will have cost $2,000,000 and it is declared by persons competent to decide that it will be the handsomest building for the money it has cost in the United State

Edwards Captured

On Friday one Frank Edwards who has been living at the Uncle Sams house for a year past and who has been working for the Midland ever since went to the Buckeye Livery Co. and ordered a hack sent to the hotel, declaring it was for the landlady. The horse and buggy were sent to the place and left tied in front. Edwards soon came out and got in and drove off. Nothing further was seen of him at Colorado Saturday. Mr. Bachof put the case in the hands of the officers. Marshal Dana soon heard from Castle Rock that the outfit had passed through Douglas county bound for Denver. He went to Denver and on Sunday accompanied an officer of that place in a search through the city. It did not take them long to get trace of their man, who was attempting to sell the rig, and they soon spotted him on the streets. He was taken under arrest and brought to this city yesterday morning. Edwards had badly used up the horse, and yesterday declared that he must have been drunk.

District Court.

The district court opens this morning and the following grand jury has been subpoenaed: Frank Welty, of Monument, Henry Muller, Divide, H. S. Francisco, Manitou, D. C. Dudley, Colorado Springs, Charles Cross, Manitou, C. D. Taylor, Colorado City, J. G. Evans, Table Rock, J. O. Quick, Fountain, C. H. DeGraff, Colorado Springs, H. B. Quimby, Colorado City, F. D. Taylor, Colorado Springs, C. W. Long, Colorado Springs. There will be but two cases for the grand jury to investigate cases of gaming before the law requiring in [illegible] went into effect. There will be a large number of informations filed this term, as the county jail is full of prisoners. [illegible] are not likely to be many criminal trials before the January term, however

Golden Dramatic Troupe

The Golden Dramatic troupe will appear at the opera house on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, presenting two new plays, "The Martyr" and "Our Bachelors." The company, consisting of twenty people, carry their own band and orchestra. The Indianapolis Journal says: "The crowd leaving the opera house last evening after the presentation of 'Our Bachelors' by the Golden troupe was uncommonly complacent and smiling. It had been tickled and tickled nearly to death. Laughing began with the first appearance of Professor Baugle and continued without any sort of let up until each poor suffering, laugh stricken member of the audience willingly turned his back on the drop curtain, for the laughter provoked was of the side splitting variety that leaves you weak in the joints and hoarse in the throat. The company presenting this play is evenly balanced. Although interest necessarily centers about the role of Professor Baugle, played by Harry Robinson, from his make up to the final squeak of his ventriloqual voice, he is inimitable, he is a work of art. Martin Golden as Judge Jowler, in a very different way, gives an excellent interpretation of his role. Miss Butler was as charming as ever and made a splendid Eva Clinton. The company is the best that has been here in a long time and deserves crowded houses and will have them during the remaining performance."

Willing to Satisfy His Curiosity.

Every one has seen him. He works in some capacity in fully half the stores in the country, and is known either as the Inquisitive Clerk or the Clerk-Who-Knows-It-All.

He was behind the counter in one of the many drug stores where he is employed a few days ago when a man came in and said he wanted to get half a dozen six ounce bottles.

"Bottles?" he asked.

"Yes, bottles," responded the man.

"With or without corks?" he asked

"With corks," was the response.

"Want 'em empty?" he inquired.

"Certainly."

"And new?"

"Do you suppose I want bottles you've been keeping strychnine in?"

The clerk said such an idea had never entered his head, and then asked:

"What do you want them for?"

"To break," responded the impatient customer promptly.

"What?"

The customer beckoned to him to lean over the counter, and then caught hold of the lapel of his coat and whispered:

"I wouldn't want the neighbors to get on to it, but I rather like to hear them crack. Just a whim of mine. It's better than breaking windows, and gives me just as much pleasure; but my supply has given out and I want a few to hold me over until another carload arrives."

The clerk looked at the customer doubtfully.

"Oh, well, of course it's nothing to me," he said.

"Then what made you ask about it?" demanded the customer.

The clerk made no reply, but got the bottles. As he was making the change, however, the spirit moved him to ask:

"What do you do with the corks?"

"Chew 'em," was the reply. "It's my I know the vigoration. Try it some time."

Then the customer walked out, and the clerk shook his head and tapped his forehead. But he has asked no questions since. Chicago Tribune.

How to Prevent Wrinkles.

Wrinkles, of course, cannot be entirely prevented, but there is no use in having as many as most people in middle life and old age are decorated with. One does not think any the better or clearer for wrinkling up the forehead and screwing up the eyes, and yet nine people out of ten contract this habit in early youth. This indulgence soon fixes the wrinkles and they never go away. The habit, too, of making faces indicative of the various emotions contributes a great many of these spoilers of beauty. A placid expression is certainly very much more lovely either in man or woman than one disturbed by useless grimaces. An even temper and a patient mind will do wonders in the way of smoothing out the wrinkled brow of care.

The Alta Vista!

FAMILY HOTEL. EDW'D W. KENT, Prop.

We wish to inform the public of the change in proprietorship of the Alta Vista Hotel, and to indicate the policy under which it will be operated by the new management.

We do not claim that the house, in its conveniences and appointments, or its table and service, will excel that of other first class houses of its kind throughout the country, but hope and intend to make it, at least, no poorer.

We expect our guests to be people who want greater privacy and independence, greater comforts and conveniences, than even good boarding houses can supply, without the annoyances and disturbing bustle of a large transient or commercial hotel

We intend to make distinctive hotel features as little apparent as possible and to introduce new features to add to the homelike air and comfort of the house.

To the citizens of Colorado Springs to whom Mr. McLean and Mr. Mudge are so favorably known, particularly after their successful season, just closed, at the Ute, it is sufficient to say that, with Mr. McLean as steward and Mr. Mudge as clerk, every desire of our guests will be satisfactorily supplied.

We intend that everyone connected with the house shall be alert to perform promptly and courteously, without an air of professional indifference or condescension, those many little services which minister so largely to the comfort of our guests, especially of people with slightly impaired health

We would be pleased to have everyone who is looking for comfortable accommodations call and inspect our rooms and learn of the advantages which the House has to offer.
